Overview

Parents that separate will need to have a plan for deciding how they will share and divide their parenting responsibilities. This plan can be called a parenting plan, a time-share plan, or an agreement ("stipulation") regarding child custody and visitation. Any plan must be in writing and signed by both parents and a judge.

In California, either parent can have custody, or the parents can share custody. The judge makes the final decision but usually will approve the arrangement both parents agree upon. If the parents can't agree, the judge will make a decision at a court hearing. The judge will usually not make a decision about custody/visitation until after the parents have met with a mediator.

Mediation

If parents can't agree on custody/visitation on their own, the judge will have the parents meet with Family Court Services to see if an agreement can be reached with the help of a mediator. Parents can also hire a private mediator.

Court Hearing

If mediation doesn't work, the judge will make a decision at a hearing. In some courts, the mediator will make a recommendation to the judge about custody/visitation orders. Ask the mediator how the process works in your local court.

The judge may appoint an evaluator to recommend a parenting plan. A parent can also ask for an evaluation, but the request may not be granted. Parents may have to pay for an evaluation.

The judge also may appoint lawyers for children in custody cases.

Child's Needs Come First

The law says that judges must give custody according to what is best for the child. In most cases, judges give custody to one or both parents. There are times when custody is given to a friend or relative. You should consult a lawyer for information about custody given to non-parents.

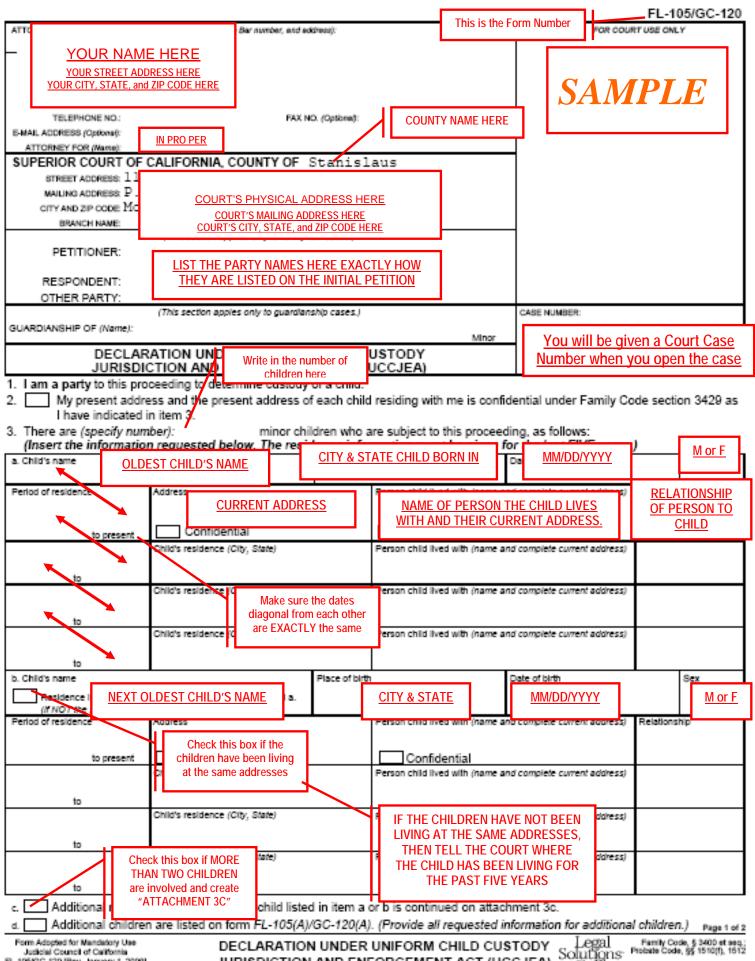

Changing Custody/Visitation Orders

After a judge makes a custody/visitation order, one or both parents may want to change the order. If the parents can't agree on a change, one of the parents must file a Request for Order with the Court asking for a change. If you want to change your order, you and the other parent will probably have to meet with a mediator to talk about why you want the order to change.

Notes:

- The Income and Expense Declaration (FL 150) is included in this packet. This form is also accessible on the Judicial Council website and if filled in directly from the website, calculations will be computed for you.
- Child Custody and Visitation issues - If you are in agreement you may use the "Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children" forms along with a Petition for Custody. If you are not in agreement, you may use a "Request for Order" packet.
- Notice of Change of Address and Telephone Number (MC–040). When you have a change in your address or telephone number, you MUST purchase this form and file it with the Clerk's Office.

Overview

Parents that separate will need to have a plan for deciding how they will share and divide their parenting responsibilities. This plan can be called a parenting plan, a time-share plan, or an agreement ("stipulation") regarding child custody and visitation. Any plan must be in writing and signed by both parents and a judge.

In California, either parent can have custody, or the parents can share custody. The judge makes the final decision but usually will approve the arrangement both parents agree upon. If the parents can't agree, the judge will make a decision at a court hearing. The judge will usually not make a decision about custody/visitation until after the parents have met with a mediator.

Mediation

If parents can't agree on custody/visitation on their own, the judge will have the parents meet with Family Court Services to see if an agreement can be reached with the help of a mediator. Parents can also hire a private mediator.

Court Hearing

If mediation doesn't work, the judge will make a decision at a hearing. In some courts, the mediator will make a recommendation to the judge about custody/visitation orders. Ask the mediator how the process works in your local court.

The judge may appoint an evaluator to recommend a parenting plan. A parent can also ask for an evaluation, but the request may not be granted. Parents may have to pay for an evaluation.

The judge also may appoint lawyers for children in custody cases.

Child's Needs Come First

The law says that judges must give custody according to what is best for the child. In most cases, judges give custody to one or both parents. But there are times when custody is given to a friend or relative. You should consult a lawyer for information about custody given to non-parents.

Changing Custody/Visitation Orders

After a judge makes a custody/visitation order, one or both parents may want to change the order. If the parents cannot agree on a change, one of the parents must file a motion with the Court asking for a change. If you want to change your order, you and the other parent will probably have to meet with a mediator to talk about why you want the order to change.
